International news

Bulgaria and Romania have been cleared to join the Schengen travel-free zone, after Austria lifted its veto, originally imposed due to fears over irregular migration. This brings Schengen membership to 29 countries: 25 EU member states along with Switzerland, Norway, Iceland and Liechtenstein. More on the news on borders, the Netherlands started doing additional border checks hoping to curb irregular migration. Dutch border inspections for now consist of random checks as the Netherlands has only 50 border officers and 840 border crossings. (Sources: Al Jazeera, InfoMigrants)

After the fall of the Assad regime many Syrians who fled to neighbouring countries, such as Turkey and Lebanon, are starting to make their way back to Syria. Despite significant uncertainty over what lies ahead, many returning migrants are celebrating their new sense of freedom.

Meanwhile, many European countries have ceased processing asylum claims by Syrian applicants, raising significant concerns among citizens and migration support organisations. This article provides a country-by-country overview of EU member states which have opted to stop considering asylum application by people from Syria, and assesses the likely impact on Syrian migrants in each country. UK borders and migration policy

Germany will criminalise the facilitation of people smuggling to the UK as part of a new agreement between the two countries. Meanwhile, a person seeking asylum convicted of manslaughter after four people died when he steered a dinghy across the English Channel is appealing his convictions and sentence. Ibrahima Bah, from Senegal, said the smugglers forced him to pilot the boat.?(Sources: Home Office, The Standard)

There are ongoing issues with transition to eVisa, including mismatch of nationalities experienced by Hongkongers who are classed as Chinese on the new system, and worries that people will be refused entry to the UK. (Sources: inews, the Guardian)

In other news, Prime Minister Keir Starmer has been criticised for not including migration in the six 'milestones' announced last week, while this briefing provides an overview of fee waivers for immigration applications. (Sources: The Standard, Free Movement)

Specific migrant groups

A new briefing from the House of Commons Library provides an analysis of the Ukrainian schemes as a possible model for responses to other conflicts. (Source: House of Commons Library)

On children and young people, a recently concluded litigation reveals a local authority had continued to dispute age of a child arriving into their care, although significant evidence proved his claimed age. Elsewhere, ECPAT reports on the rise of child trafficking referrals over the last five years, with 2023 recording the highest figures. Although, most referrals were for those with British nationality, 22% were for Albanian, Sudanese and Eritrean (Sources: Doughty Street Chambers, ECPAT)

Continuing on the modern slavery theme, an agency which recruited workers for the UK agricultural sector has had its licence revoked by the Gangmasters and Labour Abuse Authority following an investigation. AG International brought more than 1,450 people from Indonesia to pick fruit in 2022, some of whom were left with debts of more than £5,000. (Source: the Guardian)

There have also been a few publications on various aspects of modern slavery:

- Inspection of the Immigration Enforcement Competent Authority (ICEA), the body that makes modern slavery decisions about people likely to be facing removal, concluded that the speed of decisions was to the detriment of quality. (Source: Independent Chief Inspector of Borders and Immigration)
- Local authority staff training, with recommendations including developing regularly delivered, standardised training modules, promoting inclusive language (including in relation to migration status), and incorporating Equality, Diversity and inclusion (EDI) and cultural sensitivity themes.
