

Migration news roundup 2 October 2023

- Stories that inspired us this week
  - International news
- UK borders and migration policy
  - Specific migrant groups
  - Cohesion and integration

Stories that inspired us this week

Tottenham manager Ange Postecoglou shares from his life story and career, including how his family left Greece suddenly for Australia when he was a child. (Source: BBC)

Artwork by Bosnian artist Dobrivoje Beljkasic, who settled in Bristol in the 1990s because of the Bosnian war, will be shown at an exhibition in Bosnia to mark his 100 year anniversary. (Source: BBC)

Local stories this week include:

- Read about the young people shortlisted for the 2023 Yorkshire Asian Young Achievers award. (Source: Telegraph and Argus)
- This Sheffield based project enabled young people seeking sanctuary to work together to create their own video games. (Source: The Star)
- The Journeys of Hope exhibition at Bradford Cathedral will share stories of people who made the city their home as part of the Windrush generation and as Asian migrants from Uganda. (Source: Telegraph and Argus)

International news

Over 100,000 people - the majority of the population of the Nagorno-Karabakh region of Azerbaijan, an ethnic Armenian enclave, - have fled to Armenia, following military intervention by Azerbaijan. The UN has sent a team to assess the situation. (Source: BBC)

An anti-migrant organisation in South Africa has repositioned itself as a political party. The vigilante group Operation Dudula seeks deportation of migrants. (Source: the Guardian)

Within the EU, migrant business owners in Cyprus called for peace after their properties were vandalised during a violent anti-migrant protest. At the UN General Assembly the Greek prime minister laid out his government's migration policy following increases in people arriving by boat over the summer, and reiterated the importance of working with non-EU neighbouring countries.

Germany launched more patrols along the Poland and Czechia borders to stop unauthorised crossings. (Sources: InfoMigrants, AP News)

UK borders and migration policy

In a widely reported speech in the US, Home Secretary Suella Braverman claimed some people are being granted refugee protection due to fearing discrimination related to their gender or sexual orientation, rather than being at risk of persecution. A UNHCR representative was one of many speaking out after these comments, stating the UN Refugee Convention does not require reform. Braverman also made negative remarks about multiculturalism. (Source: BBC)

The All-Party Parliamentary Groups (APPGs) on Migration and on Poverty issued a call for written evidence for an inquiry considering the impact of migration, refugee and asylum policy on poverty, closing on 25 October. (Source: APPG on Migration)

Here are two useful articles: the first explains NRPf (the 'no recourse to public funds' condition) and the second article explains the difference between refugee status and humanitarian protection. (Sources: Free Movement)

Specific migrant groups

This legal article gives guidance on how to challenge a negative age-assessment decision for young people seeking asylum. (Source: Free Movement)

Some university representatives from the UK have struggled to get their visas for Nigeria to encourage international student applications, which could affect recruitment this autumn. Nigeria is one of five priority countries named in the UK's international education strategy. (Source: The Pie News)

In his review of former Prime Minister Theresa May's book, The Abuse of Power, legal blogger Colin Yeo argues May does not understand why the Windrush scandal happened. (Source: Free Movement)

Modern slavery news includes:

- Research has found there's been a low uptake of Slavery and Trafficking Prevention Orders (STPO) and Risk Orders (STRO) that can be imposed on people who have, or are at risk of, committing a modern slavery offence. (Source: University of Nottingham)
- A new report recommends strengthening statutory guidance on licensing, as it has potential to address modern slavery. (Source: Shiva Foundation)
  - A new study explores the 'non-punishment principle' in the Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings in relation to the UK conviction of two Vietnamese children for drug offences in 2009, despite being modern slavery victims. The Modern Slavery Act now provides a statutory defence in such cases. The report also looks at this issue in light of more recent immigration legislation. (Source: Council of Europe)

Cohesion and integration

The Yorkshire Integration Festival in Sheffield celebrated migrants, refugees and all our communities in Yorkshire and Humber. Thousands of visitors from across Sheffield and the rest of Yorkshire and Humber enjoyed performances, stalls, exhibitions and food that showcased the diverse range of cultures and customs we find in this region. (Source: Migration Yorkshire)

As Black History Month in the UK begins:

- This interview with Akyaaba Addai-Sebo, the creator of UK Black History Month, looks back at the conversation that started it, the event's reception and development in Britain, and his personal experiences of growing up in Ghana. (Source: the Guardian)
- A report found less than half of black Britons feel proud to be British. The study by the Black British Voices Project (BBVP) analysed the impact of racial discrimination on identity, education and the justice system and describes a 'chronic level of racial disparities.' (Source: the Guardian, BBVP)

The Mail on Sunday was forced to issue a correction to a statement it published by the Home Secretary that had made claims about British-Pakistani men's involvement in child grooming gangs. The press regulator (Ipso) ruled this was 'significantly misleading' as Home Office research had found offenders most commonly to be white. (Source: the Guardian)

A new ten year plan for improving the mental health of the nation includes ending hostile environment policies, tackling racism and discrimination and introducing a national strategy on refugee integration. The plan is supported by 30 partner organisations. (Source: Centre for Mental Health)

Last updated:

2nd October 2023

Contact us about research

If you have any questions about our research, contact us:

research@migrationyorkshire.org.uk

0113 378 8188

---

Source URL: <https://www.migrationyorkshire.org.uk/news/migration-news-roundup-2-october-2023>