UK borders and migration policy

Plans to open an accommodation centre for asylum seekers at Linton on Ouse were discarded after the Ministry of Defence confirmed it withdrew its offer to the Home Office, explaining it has obligations to do something with the site and noting it has previously proposed alternative sites to the Home Office. (Source: Yorkshire Post)

On Channel crossings:

- There are continued reports of high numbers of people arriving via small boats. (Source: BBC)
- A leaked military intelligence report suggests a growing number of people arriving on small boats are Albanian. By citing lack of war or famine in Albania as a reason to doubt people's sincerity in seeking asylum, the Daily Mail article demonstrates a fundamental misunderstanding of asylum and persecution in the context of the UN Refugee Convention. (Source: Daily Mail)
- More than 13,000 people have crossed the Channel in small boats since the announcement of the Rwanda scheme, suggesting that so far it has done little to deter migrants from making the dangerous journey. (Source: Sky News)

A legal analysis of the Home Office's recent policy paper on legal migration and border control gives updates on various developments involved in digitalisation of the immigration system, including replacing Biometric Residence Permit cards with eVisas. (Sources: Free Movement, Home Office)

Foreign national offenders might be required to scan their faces five times a day using smartwatches, as an alternative to an ankle tag. (Source: the Guardian)

This article highlights the problem of unregulated immigration advisers giving fraudulent advice to vulnerable migrants. It suggests the Office of Immigration Services Commissioner is underfunded and unable to tackle the issue. (Source: Open Democracy)

Specific migrant groups

A survey reveals that around a quarter of sponsors on the Homes for Ukraine scheme say they will not renew their sponsorship after six months, in part due to the rising cost of living and inadequate support package available to hosts. (Source: BBC)

This government article describes how international students access UK Universities and notes the diversity and cultural exchange they bring as well as the contribution they make to the UK economy. (Source: Department for Education)

On EU nationals, this story spotlights the case of a Spanish born 45-year-old woman who has lived in the UK since she was a baby, struggling to secure her status under EU Settlement Scheme (EUSS) due to difficulties in obtaining ID proving she has EU nationality. Meanwhile, another report focuses on sham marriages for the purpose of obtaining status under the EUSS. (Sources: the Guardian, BBC)
