A new study shows that search and rescues in the central Mediterranean are not a 'pull factor' in the choice to migrate via that route. (Source: InfoMigrants)

UK borders and migration policy

From 2024, finer for employers or landlords will at least triple for employing or renting property to people without the necessary migration status. Here is some analysis of the context and possible implications. (Sources: Home Office, Free Movement)

The Home Office published updated statistics 'relating to the Illegal Migration Act' on small boat arrivals, asylum applications and support, enforcement and decision makers, covering data to

July 2023. In a week unofficially known as ‘small boats week’, where government wanted to proactively discuss the topic, media reports of Ascension Island being a potential site for deporting people seeking asylum gained coverage. Then tragedy struck with news of six people who died trying to cross the Channel. Over 50 were rescued after their boat capsized but some people remain unaccounted for. This article fact-checks claims about the asylum system by the Immigration Minister and Shadow Home Secretary. Robert Jenrick, the immigration minister, also appeared to be reconsidering leaving the European Convention on Human Rights to remove blocks to the Rwanda plan. (Sources: BBC, the Guardian)

Government clashed with immigration lawyers over various issues:

- Following the recent suspension of certain immigration law firms, the Professional Enablers Taskforce was formally launched to ‘increase enforcement action against lawyers who help migrants exploit the immigration system’, with plans to expand the remit to other professions. (Source: Home Office)
- Legal aid providers have written to the Lord Chancellor expressing concern about payment rates and their capacity to cope with the volume of work anticipated to result from the Illegal Migration Act. (Source: The Law Society Gazette)

Migration to the UK in recent decades has been at a similar level to other high-income countries, according to this briefing on net migration. (Source: Migration Observatory)

Specific migrant groups

On asylum processes:

- Over 6,000 asylum cases are recorded as ‘withdrawn’ in Q1 2023, over three times more than in the preceding quarter. This article considers whether the Home Office is acting unlawfully in treating some asylum claims as ‘withdrawn’. It explains that new reasons for withdrawal (claimants not reporting, not maintaining contact, and not updating their contact details) were applied to cases before the date they were added to the immigration rules. (Source: Free Movement)
- This three minute analysis calculates government is unlikely to clear the legacy backlog of asylum claims by the end of 2023 if decisions continue at the current ‘best’ rate. (Source: Channel 4)
- Guidance for Streamlined Asylum Processing (SAP) for children’s casework has been updated to reflect the extended timeframe to include non-legacy claims made from 28 June 2022 to 6 March 2023. (Source: UK Visas and Immigration)

On asylum accommodation and support:

- Although a first group of people seeking asylum was moved into the Bibby Stockholm, subsequently they were removed following a Legionella outbreak in the water that can cause serious lung infection. (Source: Sky)

- There are concerns about the performance of outsourced services for accommodating and supporting people seeking asylum. Meanwhile Serco anticipates increased income due to greater demand for its work in the immigration sector. (Sources: the Guardian, Evening Standard)
- A freedom of information request revealed painting over cartoons at Manston, the asylum reception centre where children are held, has cost over £1,500. (Source: the Guardian)
